ZOOMing in on Different Views

With Maria Carmela Rubio-Torset & Catherine Ledresseur

Sharing ideas, experiences and viewpoints for effective teaching

- Personal and professional perspectives of English teaching in China
- A guide to the Zoom application
- Making the most of Quizlet
- World Café conversations
- FabLab projects

Two Filipinas who are making their marks in France will be sharing their experiences of teaching languages in other countries and online. This will include discussing how English is taught across the world, looking at similarities and differences for the teacher and in the classroom.

Furthermore, they will be sharing technologies that we could try to integrate into our own work, including Quizlet and a detailed look at the Zoom application and its suitability for use in online teaching. How does it work? What are the advantages? Why is it different to other teaching applications?

Then there will be a live demonstration of how the World Café type of activity can offer an effective opportunity for students and teachers alike. Let's zoom in on your perspectives on teaching languages and bring your experiences and teaching methods to share with the group.

As a bonus, we will also be briefly viewing the insides of a FabLab and a co-working space in Pays de Gex.

Maria Carmela Rubio-Torset teaches English to Young Learners. She is passionate about linking new technology to education, adopting new technology in the classroom and being open to innovative ideas. She is also co-founder of Pangloss Labs, a non-profit 1901 association based in Ferney-Voltaire, which promotes educational uses for science and technology. She is based in Marseille and is presently with Language Connexions teaching in private schools and online with clients from Asia and Europe.

Catherine Ledresseur was a Philippine secondary school teacher who also taught English in China for over 4 years. She has helped develop a special needs division in a secondary school run by the Philippine Department of Education and has recently moved to France to be with her husband. She is tutoring privately in her neighbourhood in La Ciotât, PACA Region.

This event is free to TESOL France members. The non-members registration fee is €8. Please register online: www.tesol-france.org
